We are all looking for top paying careers, but how do we find them?

What is the highest paying job in the United States? Well, from the CNBC article it is a Anesthesiologist at about $269600 a year. However with years of education and hundreds of thousands of dollars in loans it is no doubt that it is out of most average individuals pockets.

For most of us finding a careers that pay well is just a dream but fortunately for people who are willing to work hard there is a way of attaining top earning careers without losing your house or taking a massive unpayable loan.

The amount of time, money and energy spent on going through a university in the United States has become so ridiculous that many are just settling for a crummy job that makes ends meet rather than being handcuffed to a life of paying a loan they wished they never taken.

In regards to women is the same situation, they find themselves forced into making a choice between having children and having a career. So, consequently trying to achieve the top paying jobs for women status becomes just a dream. In addition, women come up against the glass ceiling of the male dominated workplace which means until she is considerably better than her male counterpart she will unlikely be considered for the higher paid positions.

Most companies will argue that this is just capitalism weed out the less capable candidates or a Darwinistic process where the survival of the fittest. Either way, if you are a woman or unable to afford college fees the odds for you becoming successful in the high page corporate world is slim.

The fact is, most well paid jobs in the US and in many cases in the world (apart from the Scandinavian countries where education is free and gender equality is high) a large amount of time and money is needed.

So, what is the solution to finding the highest paying careers in the world?

That is a great question and one I am asked daily from male and female friends alike and really there is only one answer and that is become a entrepreneur and start your own business.

If I do not have enough money for my education, where will I get the money for a business?

Another good question, but a very simple answer. Get a job to pay the bills and then work from home to build your business until you can leave your job and become a full-time entrepreneur.

I needed to leave my job because I wanted to have children, can I start a business from home also?

I often hear friends of mind who have children say, "Is there any good paying jobs near me" and of course there isn't much available for the professional person with children, so in most cases they need to think out of the box.

As many parents will tell you, there is a time when the kids are at an age when the school has taken them off their hands and your days are slightly easier than they were. However, your husband is working more and more hours to keep the family afloat and the bill paying is becoming a more difficult task every month.

There was a time you felt you had great career that paid for those luxuries in life, but those times have far gone and sticking to a budget is becoming a stressful daily pastime.

We all want careers that pay well, but we need to remember that we are living in the real world, where we don't always get what we want, so rather than cry about what could be, take control of your life by developing your own top earning careers with a company that cares.
